thing between Tuesday night and Wednesday morning. Mrs. Mellish had said no.

The very tone of that dry "No, ma'am" beat at Nan's ears. She had asked Mrs. Mellish to find out whether the maids had seen or heard anything, and it was while Mrs. Mellish was out of the room that the impression had been made—a slammed door, eyes with the blinds drawn down—something to hide. Mrs. Mellish came back, and reported that nobody had noticed anything.

Between 2 and 3:30 Jervis had walked out of the house. No one had seen or heard him go—no one had seen anything—no one had heard anything. Then why had Mrs. Mellish slammed her door and pulled down her blinds? The impression that she had done so was clearer now than it had been at the time. The ice had set and defused it sharply.

Nan walked quickly to the hearth, and rang the bell. Then she faced round towards the door and waited until Alfred appeared.

"Will you ask Mrs. Mellish to come and speak to me here, please."

She would see Mrs. Mellish here. In the housekeeper's room, with its photographic enlargements of Mrs. Mellish's husband and Mrs. Mellish's respected and respectable parents, with Mrs. Mellish's sweet-grass workbox and Mrs. Mellish's photograph album on a small rose-wood table, and a large illuminated text hanging over the mantelpiece, Nan had been made to feel an alien and an intruder.

The very china dogs, white poodles with baskets in their mouths, had gazed at her aloofly from either end of the mantelpiece. The old-fashioned wall-clock had a disapproving tick. Here she could meet Mrs. Mellish upon neutral ground. This was Jervis' room.

Alfred went away, and presently came back again. Mrs. Mellish had just stepped out.

"I would like to see her when she comes in."

Nan went back to her pacing.

At 8 o'clock the telephone bell rang with a startling loudness and set her heart thumping. She was by the door. She turned, ran back, and picked up the receiver.

"Who's there?"

"Ferdinand."

"Yes?"

"Look here, Nan, there's something I want to follow up. I'm leaving in a hired car. It may be anything at all, but I feel bound to follow it up."

"What is it?"

"It doesn't amount to much. There's a new garage the far side of Croyston. Well, the man says a little black car stopped to fill up at 7 o'clock Wednesday morning. He was about because he was doing a job on his own car. He says there were two men in the car, and from the description one of them might be Jervis, but it's very vague."

"It was the other man who did the talking. He was the driver, and he'd red hair, so it oughtn't to be hard to trace him. He talked about going to New York, so I'm off looking for him. Don't you worry."

Nan felt dazed and weak. The receiver was heavy in her hand. She said:

"Jervis hasn't a small black car." "The car was the other man's—he was driving. They may have met by appointment, or Jervis might simply be getting a lift—or it might have been Jervis at all. The garage man only said, 'A gentleman with black hair.' That's about all he noticed—his first name isn't Sherlock."

Ferdinand rang off, and Nan began walking up and down again. She walked for a long while, and then sat down by the window and left this flow past her like a sluggish stream, so slow that though it moved, the movement was imperceptible.

At seven the dressing-bell rang, and Alfred came in. He hovered for a moment by the door and then came nearer. Mrs. Mellish had missed her bus from Croyston—and would it be convenient for Mrs. Weare to see her after dinner?

Nan said, "Yes—it doesn't matter," and Alfred withdrew.

When the dinner-bell rang, she realized that she had not changed. She went upstairs, washed her hands, and came down again, to sit alone at the big table in the dining room and take a teaspoonful from each dish that was offered to her.

To Be Continued.

The Stars Say—

For Saturday, Oct. 8

THE combination of lunar and mutual aspects bearing rule upon the affairs of this day presage a state of extreme liveliness and excitability, with heightened prospects of much physical activity as well as mental activity or high pressure. With the latter kept within bounds, with amiability and good nature, there is prospect of much painful exploitation of this spirit of enterprise and initiative. Strange adventures are seen but be on guard against tricks.

Those whose birthday it is are confronted by a year of the unusual and unexpected, with the spirits under high stimulus for adventure and excitement. If these are to prove profitable it is necessary to put a damper upon violent, quarrelsome, reckless and tricky impulse. A child born on this day may be bold, courageous, rash and tempestuous, with a leaning to a virile, physical life as well as mental originality and freedom, all of which may bring prosperity and renown.

Notable nativity: Nance O'Neil, actress.

"Heart of a Wife"

— BY ABILE GARRISON —

Madge's Father, Philip Vertera, and Ned are Assigned to Guard Madge in the House While the Attack is Made.

FOR the fraction of a second there was no answer to Hugh's voiced theory that Charles Owen must be the mysterious horseman whom Wynne had trailed to the door of the farmhouse in which Marion and Carolyn were imprisoned. Then Harry Underwood spoke hesitatingly.

"What do you think, Chet?" My father lifted his head—he had been standing in a stooped position, apparently studying the ground—and answered incisively.

"Everything points to Owen as the horseman. I agree with Hugh that Lee Chow's report upon Owen—the trailing of him up here—fits in perfectly with this theory. But I do not see that it complicates our problem at all. In fact, in one way, it eases it. We can be fairly sure that the Chinese were simply red herrings of Owen's invention."

An Important Pool

"Dangerous as Owen is, we need not fear him as we do those Orientals, so let us put him out of our minds. 'Only'—he lifted an impressive forefinger—"we must not lose sight of that horse when we are attacking the house. One man must be detailed to watch it."

"We'll do that," Hugh said. "And now there's only one thing to be settled, and that is the guard which is to remain here with Mrs. Graham and Miss Mary."

He hesitated for a second and then went on.

"In one way it's the most important post of all. I am giving the men instructions that the second we succeed in liberating the girls, they are to be rushed here under guard of two picked men, while the rest of us attend to cleaning up the kidnappers. But there must be two men at least here; three, if possible—and—"

Picking the Guard

It is unlike Hugh Grantland to be hesitant about anything, and for the fraction of a second I wondered what was the reason for his halting speech. Then his reason flashed upon me, and I caught my breath, for I knew my father's natural reluctance to be anywhere save in "the forefront of the hottest battle," despite the baseball cap with which advancing age and its attendant infirmities have penalized him.

But I also knew the same judgment, the infinite wisdom, the greatness of spirit which my father and I was not surprised to hear him answer Hugh with prompt decision.

"Don't hesitate, lad! I know better than you that I could give no special help to you in front, and might be a hindrance. I'll stay here."

"Hush!" Hugh repeated with attractiveness. "Repeat 'You know it's because you don't know you're a coward. You must be sure to think for me with you down the road you want to keep my face with you, don't you?'"

Again my father's reply was prompt.

"If Mr. Vertera and that only be so."

Mr. Grantland is in a quandary. He has been told that the Chinese are in the house, and he is not sure that he can trust his own eyes.

"I am not sure that I can trust my own eyes," he said. "I am not sure that I can trust my own ears."

"I am not sure that I can trust my own nose," he said. "I am not sure that I can trust my own taste."

"I am not sure that I can trust my own touch," he said. "I am not sure that I can trust my own smell."

Harding Ready for Opening Home Conflict with Shelby

PURPLE - WOLVERINE BATTLE TOPS SLATE OF BIG TEN GAMES

Ohio State Plays Indiana Saturday; Minnesota To Tackle Purdue.

By The Associated Press. CHICAGO, Oct. 7.—The Western conference football championship season gets down to serious business tomorrow as Chicago plays at Yale, but the choice offering of the day will be at Ann Arbor where Northwestern and Michigan collide.

Instead of an opening game of the title campaign, the clash in Michigan stadium might have made a better finale.

In the other Big Ten championship games Iowa will meet Wisconsin, Purdue tackles Minnesota and Indiana plays Ohio State.

Illinois will spend another Saturday in the minor leagues, meeting Bradley college as a final tune-up for next week's battle with Northwestern.

Whatever happens at Ann Arbor will hardly be regarded as an upset. They appear to be evenly matched that anything can happen and around 75,000 fans have decided not to miss the attraction.

Iowa probably will outweigh Wisconsin, but the Badgers, for some reason or other, are favored. Purdue ranks as better than Minnesota, but not much, while Ohio State's veteran eleven figures to be quite a bit too good for Indiana.

Neville Danner, suspected of being a spy, was in 1937, will enter into a four-year contract with a salary of $10,000.

WRESTLING RESULTS

By The Associated Press. WASHINGTON.—Rudy Dusch, 210, Omaha, won by decision from Glen Garibaldi, 210, New York, one hour, one minute.

Games Changed

Harding's football warriors will get a chance to play one game this season under artificial light. Information received from Bucyrus yesterday and verified today by K. H. Marshall, principal of Harding, is to the effect that the annual clash between the Presidents and Redskins will be played on Friday night, Oct. 15 instead of Oct. 13 as originally scheduled.

A new lighting system is to be installed at Lane field in Bucyrus, the cost being absorbed by the high school athletic association.

Concurrent with this schedule shift, Shelby High school officials have announced that the Marshall-Walker contest has been changed from Saturday, Nov. 13, to Friday, Nov. 19, in order that the game will not conflict with the Notre Dame-Navy game at Cleveland on the 19th.

The New Fall Suits and Topcoats are now on display.

"TRIP" AND "SLEDGE"—WHAT A PAIR!

When the Kansas University eleven takes the opposition line this evening they'll be doing it with a vengeance, for here are the Hammer brothers, Bert ("Trip") and James ("Sledge") who are conditioners for left and right end, respectively. The Hammers are twins and both from Columbia, Mo. Not only are they a formidable line-backing combination, but they also star as the place-kicking duo of the team, "Sledge" holding the pigskin and brother "Trip" doing the booting.

Groen sent 256 pins flying in the first game. He turned in scores of 187 in the next game and 211 in the third to give him a total of 654.

Mexican Matman To Meet Dude Chick Here Monday

Four of the finest light heavyweights in the country will swing into action here next Monday night on an all light heavyweight program at the Shovel gym.

A galaxy of new faces will appear, headed by the Mexican light heavyweight champion, Francisco Aguayo, the greatest wrestler Mexico has ever produced and at present in this country making a drive for a championship bout with Hugh Nichols, Finky Gardner, Joe Bauski or any one of the three or four men now claiming the 175-pound title.

Aguayo has been hurling challenges right and left since his advent in this section of the country and so far has been left to cool his heels in solitary confinement. In other words, all the best of the American 175-pounders have left the boy from the land of hot tamales very much alone.

In choosing an opponent for Aguayo in his first start in this section of the country, Kauffman selected the rough house Texas, Dude Chick of Dallas, Tex. The choosing of a Texas to meet Aguayo wasn't a coincidence on the part of Kauffman. Texans have no feelings of love for Mexicans and that, together with Chick's naturally sour disposition, is likely to make a rough evening for the dapper Aguayo.

However, the Max is said to be one of the fastest men on his feet that has ever risen to the front rank of the world's light heavyweights. This speed is the principal factor that has carried him to his present high eminence in the mat world.

The semi-final of the show will send two more of the country's best 175 pound men into action although one of them can not be named at present.

He is wrestling under the colorful alias of the "Masked Marvel" and wears a black mask completely covering his head at all times. He is also seeking a shot at any of the three leading claimants of the world's light heavyweight title. He will not disclose his identity but it is rumored he is originally from the Pacific coast.

DENNY SHUTE SHOWS WAY TO GOLFERS IN OHIO OPEN TOURNEY

Hudson Pro Shoots Below Par To Lead Hambrick One Stroke.

By The Associated Press. SPRINGFIELD, O., Oct. 7.—Denny Shute of Hudson, O., was leading the way as a select field of golfers teed off today on the second half of the Ohio open championship. Nine others were closely lunched behind him.

The Hudson pro, defending his crown, attained leadership yesterday with two sub-par rounds of 71 and 70, for a 35-hole total of 141. Just one stroke behind him came Archie Hambrick of Zanesville, who did a first round in 68.

After burning up the course with a 66, six strokes under par, yesterday morning, Carl Rocco of Cleveland, turned in a 77 in the afternoon, to finish the first half in third position.

Bob Kepler of Dayton ranked fourth with 145. Reggie Myles of Ashland was fifth with 146. Jack Thompson of Youngstown, and Lloyd Gullickson of Cleveland, were next in line with 147.

Only two others stayed under 150. Al Espinosa of Akron and Jack Collins of Mansfield, turned in 148 and 149 respectively.

DUKE-AUBURN CLASH TOPS DIXIE PROGRAM

Tulane-Georgia. Kentucky-Georgia Tech Games Also Promise Thrills.

By The Associated Press. ATLANTA, Ga., Oct. 7.—The field of contenders for southern football honors will be narrowed by at least two ranking teams tomorrow and any of those upsets that annoy the orthodox calculators might drop others by the wayside.

Attention is focused principally on the engagements of Duke and Auburn at Birmingham and Kentucky and Georgia Tech at Atlanta as putting something of how the wild blows down in Dixie.

Tulane and Georgia promise good entertainment at New Orleans. Tennessee is figured to point for the University of North Carolina, a sufferer from early losses.

HOPES RISE FOR GOPHER GRID STARS

By The Associated Press. MINNEAPOLIS, Minn., Oct. 7.—Continued improvement in his condition, even though slight, strengthened hopes for the recovery of Myron Uhl, University of Minnesota football player, seriously ill for two weeks.

Uhl was "definitely better" today, his physician said, and early today he was resting comfortably. Uhl has a fractured sternum, suffered in football practice; pneumonia and a fractured rib.

INGALLS CALLS FOR CUT IN OHIO COSTS

Asks Voters To Help Put Government on More Economical Basis.

ected with three principal "remedies." They are "to increase the percentage of votes necessary to pass additional bond issues so as to halt the increase in local taxes and prevent the continued mortgaging of our property in the future; to provide a means of installment payments, if desired, on property taxes; to meet the problem of tax delinquency by providing legislation that will permit payment in reasonably small amounts over a definite period of years."

Ohio Cost Increase

He pledged himself to "abolish this being only an example of the many ways in which the government could lend a hand to business for general good.

Our government, he said, is tolerating taxes and conditions that have driven industries and individuals out of the state—they should be changed to attract into Ohio new industries and new citizens.

Ingalls pointed to the need for a revision of the state educational program to give every Ohio child an equal educational opportunity. He also cited the need for sympathetic administration of the affairs of the conservation department.

Ingalls asserted that he has been convinced by his travels throughout the state that people, now more than ever, feel that they need a change and that governmental costs are excessive.

Recently campaigning in the "Don't den," a term he used to describe the home town of Governor Willis, Ingalls said he was convinced by the people there that he would lead his opponent in his home town.

MEN TO SPARE AT HOOVER DAM

Workmen Now on Hand Sufficient To Complete Project in Allotted Time.

By International News Service

LAS VEGAS, Nev. — If not another man appears here to seek employment on the Hoover dam, there are already enough experienced but unemployed workers on the ground and waiting to complete the job.

"There are plenty of capable hands here to last for the full six years yet to be put in on the dam," said Leonard Blood, commissioner in charge of hiring help for the big federal project.

If the supply of labor should be suddenly exhausted, 10,000 experienced men could be secured within a 500-mile radius from Las Vegas on 24 hours' notice from lists already registered with Blood.

In spite of the magnitude of the dam project, there are at present less than 4,000 men employed in 123 different classifications of work. This is considered the peak figure of employment, engineers estimate the total will drop with succeeding years.

During the year ending June 30, 1932, more than 23,000 men personally applied for work. Officials say that at least 3,000 specially trained men are still in Las Vegas, waiting to be called to work.

During the same year 62,000 letters were received from all of the states and U. S. territories asking for jobs. Each letter received an individual reply, and all were warned not to come to Las Vegas unless sent for.

Despite these warnings scores of men daily pour into the city by almost every conceivable means of transportation. Most of them are destitute, some are accompanied by wives and families and have no food nor shelter; many of them cannot hope to pass the rigid physical examination that is required.

The government specifies that service men are to be given preference for jobs and federal regulations prevent anyone from working with reclamation bureau crews that supervise the dam work without first passing civil service examinations.

lack which the Democrats, though they advocate it, must know is almost impossible, he said. Senators from 33 states could defeat a repeal measure, he explained.

The Democratic proposal to lower tariffs would put American industries and workers in competition with the peasant labor of Europe, according to Coe.

He argued in support of Hoover's refusal to approve the cash payment of the soldiers' bonus and declared that the bonus agitation came about through an organized minority.

Three other addresses were given in the rally, after W. N. Harder, chairman of the Republican executive committee had introduced the county candidates.

Palmer, Nebo Talk

Leo B. Palmer of Palaskala, candidates for lieutenant governor, urged careful selection of candidates at the November election.

Robert L. Robe, state senator from the Thirteenth-Thirtieth senatorial district and a candidate for reelection, traced the state budget for 1933 through its various steps before adoption to support his contention that state government costs could be cut without seriously hampering its program.

The budget originally calling for $100,000,000 was reduced to approximately $82,000,000, he said. We need, he continued, to determine what are the fruits and non-essentials and to see that they are eliminated.

Congressman Grapt E. Mouser praised Ingalls' promise to rid the state highway department of politics, and said that any party that took advantage of extra money appropriated for road work to relieve unemployment and used the money to build up a political machine deserved criticism. He spoke briefly on the national campaign, and in support of his own candidacy for reelection. "I have tried to represent all persons in my district, regardless of their politics," he said.

The rally opened and closed with singing, led by Mrs. Eugene Moore with Mrs. Emma Uhler Voorhees at the piano. M. L. Morral, candidate for state representative, and Charles Guernsey of Fostoria, candidate for judge of the Third district court of appeals, spoke before Ingalls arrived. At the close of the meeting, Mr. Harder introduced Mrs. McKeever, county chairwoman, Mrs. Crow, head of the Women's chapter, Mrs. Voorhees, Mrs. Moore. He also introduced members of the recently organized Young Women's club.

Europe Day by Day

BY O. O. MINTINE

Paris, Oct. 2.—Being a river boy, there's a sentimental pull for the shadowy quail and the ruse anecdoté cascading crazily into them. I love to saunter at dusk along the Seine's edge, gazing into the cooling family life of the barges and the twinkling lights of the bridges across the bridges.

Under the stone arches at twilight gather the nightly human scum for the brew of pot-au-feu and a gutter-snipe smoke. Incredibly ragged, they are also indelibly stained with the sticky filth only the Parisian parish could produce. Sprawled on sagging and dished under slabs they toss fitfully into another day.

Each Seine bank is cluttered with stone buildings still clinging to winter's chill. Concocting flaps in woolen slippers and thick sweaters on warmest days. From the odd-shaped canyons of colored sidewalk benches the murmur of lovers mingles with the breezy air of poplars. A baker boy's tricycle rattles by.

From a forgotten back street the plaintive whine of a bistro accordion. Littered dogs stretch in bleak courts. Old men greet one another with a single quick shake. The wise catter's shrill "Whew-ee!" Green-fronted maidens with everyting out from in jars. Fascinating book stalls—rows of slanting-capped boxes with leather hinges. Often in the back, real glass for the collector. Beside them on high stools dried-up Methusans in black straw hats. Knitting wives. In the background, sombre grey-while Notre Dame and a setting sun firing a golden barrage at hideous gargoyles.

Along a boulevard, Clitby and peripatetic showmen give penny entertainments. An amateur pianist last evening was a kind fire-eater, holding aloft a dry woolen and flaming torch. Muttering incantations, he forced it down his throat, illuminating the cowed horror of his face. A crowd he groped on the pavement for the small walter of loosed litigals lifted huge bars. But the crowd moved on. A single cry was his reward.

Harlem's dusky Josephine Baker is in eclipse among cabaret entertainers. Her place is usurped by a blonde Helen Morgan who, plain was, sings topical chansons in French. Her name is Lucette Boyer and she holds forth in the Clichard near Montparnasse station, packing them in nightly. Years ago she was in a tuxedo at the Winter Garden and not a reviewer, she says, mentioned her. Today she has snatched four big stars to return. Why should she who tries. Indeed why?

A lady of sorrows seen in the restaurants patronized by the trans is the tragically wretched Yvonne Krause. Her name for weeks saddled their headlines of the solved Joseph Elwell murder. Afterward she came to Paris and never returned. She is a saint-woman in a dressmaking establishment. I saw her this noon tugging at a piece of fabric and in bowing to a passing acquaintance her smiling smile had the Mona Lisa quick evaporation.

Too, I ran into the purkish Fanny Ward, who was in a tuxedo scupper across Place Vendôme. Landing with twelve trunks and eight hat boxes she discovered at Housen she had left the hat box at Havre. Her husband, Jack Dean, was turned back to return them and will limp in tomorrow.

There's a legend outdoor cafe are possible in Paris because there are no flies. It's a dirty lie. One singled me out at a sidewalk table tonight. Everytime I shooed away it returned to a thin spit my hair. I tried to reason with it—insult to insult—but the dog he persistence finally inspired an idea at the next table to make back. Walters stopped work. All excitement. I feel a feeling I had been a foreign relative of one whose wings I pulled off when a boy. Copyright, 1932, McNaughton Syndicate, Inc.

The Marry-Go-Round

BY HELEN ROWLAND

THE LACK IN WEDLOCK. Marriage: The triumph of a woman's dream over a man's capricious.

A man realizes that he has at last turned the corner from youth to middle age when he can't feel the same keen old thrill at the prospect of meeting a new blond.

It is dangerous to plan a long honeymoon trip, these days; it is so apt to run right over into the divorce.

The average man gets intoxicated at his bachelor dinner, ostensibly to celebrate his happiness, but in reality just to forget that he is signing away his liberty.

Gold is the best-loved thing many a husband and wife together—by separating them on Saturdays, Sundays, and other fighting holidays.

The derby hat may be smart and dainty; but the only time when it really looks well is when it's hanging on the hat-rack or lying in a box.

Nothing makes a man's make-up so weak and flabby as to marry a woman who is able to lift things up for herself and willing to carry her own grip.

When a man begins to kiss his wife with that abstracted air and faraway look in his eyes, what he sees is not the fairest moon, but the come-hither look in another girl's eyes.

A woman may adore a man for his manliness and strength of character; but such a love is not the tenderest feeling for him, as all she finds herself forgiving for some boyish weakness.

Glimpses of the Past

TEN YEARS AGO.

It was Saturday, Oct. 7, 1922. A dispatch from Washington reported that former President Woodrow Wilson was closely observing the trend of national and foreign events with a view to taking an active part in the choice of the Democratic nominee in 1924. Recent developments had convinced him that the United States could not persist indefinitely in a policy of "self-isolation" but would have to sooner or later take a more active part in bringing order out of economic chaos overseas.

The New York Giants defeated the Yankees 4-3 in the fourth game of the world series. McQuillan pitching for the Giants and Myers and Jones for the Yankees. Ruth went hitless in three times at bat.

Discussing the statement of certain bankers that the country was headed for another period of inflation, Roger Babson in an analysis of the situation said that such inflation would be only temporary.

The present law governing the seal was passed in 1863. It has not been amended. In essential features the seal thus described, is very like that adopted when the state was organized in 1803. The only important difference being that while on the original the seal appeared rising over a single mountain—Mt. Logan at Chillicothe—in the present one it appears over a range of mountains.

Miss Patricia Reckly of near Prospect and Paul W. Augenstein of West Marion were united in marriage at the Emanuel Lutheran parsonage on Grand avenue by Rev. J. W. Schilling.

Harding High school graduates lost their first league game of the season in Marion, 12-10. The report said they were disappointed at the result of having defeated St. Giles the week before by a 21-0 score.

It was Monday, Oct. 7, 1912. Henry Clever, New York stock expert, reported that in spite of a temporary check due to the war of the Balkans, stocks had shown steady growth of undoubted strength during the preceding year and business was becoming active as the result of a slight harvest.

Mrs. Nellie Foster entertained for the company of children at her home on Oak street in celebration of her seventh birthday anniversary.

Mrs. Laura Dornbush was hostess to the Women's club at her opening meeting of the month. Advance club was held at the home of Mrs. E. E. Schaeffer.

A surprise party was given for the German M. E. Sunday school by Mrs. E. H. Hardin, who was to leave soon for her future home in Jacksonville, Fla.

Although the board of school directors had voted to repair the school building, the school board had declared it safe to remain closed. Superintendent H. A. Hartman refused to open it until he received a written order from the board.

Daily Guide to Health

BY DR. ROYAL A. COPELAND

Acidosis Not a Common Disorder.

The medical word "acidosis" is greatly abused, misunderstood and misapplied. By commonly it is used that the average person believes acidosis is a common disorder. In reality it is rare, and the possibility of getting it should not cause anxiety or alarm.

Frequently I am asked what foods produce acidity and what foods should be taken to prevent it. Not so long ago I wrote an article enumerating the foods that encourage acidity and those that produce an alkaline reaction. Since then I have received numerous inquiries concerning foods I did not include in my list.

May I impress my readers with the fact that if the diet is well balanced and contains abundant fruits and vegetables, there is no need to worry about acidity or acidosis. But acidosis may occur after a severe operation. It may follow an excessive loss of blood, as in a severe hemorrhage. It may be encountered in cases of prolonged starvation. In these cases the term acidosis can be properly used.

When acidosis is present there is, as the term indicates, too much acid in the tissues of the body and in the blood. Severe acidosis is extremely serious.

The balanced diet in the blood there is a definite relationship between the normal amounts of acid and alkaline substances. It is true that the diet can influence the degree of acidity in the body, but it does not necessarily alter the reaction of the blood. Only when fever has been present for a long time, or when an individual has been suffering from a prolonged organic disturbance, is there a definite change in the blood's reaction.

Contrary to common belief, most acid foods, such as the citrus fruits, actually combat the tendency to acidity. They help to keep the blood alkaline, and prevent the urine from becoming acid.

In the previous article I pointed out that certain foods are known as "base forming" foods. These tend to reduce the amount of acidity in the body. Among them are almonds, apples, avocados, bananas, cabbage, milk, lemons, raisins, radishes, potatoes and turnips. On the contrary, bread, eggs, fish, poultry, meat, chicken, pork, veal, catfish, and many other meats, are "acid forming" foods. They tend to increase the acidity in the body.

Not that the Tennesseean is the type of person you would classify as hardbitten. He is almost the opposite from that. He is humorous and kindly. He keeps a steady brown eyes look through steady brow.

And he admits that he knew all the time to conduct his committee in an informal, "folksy" way.

Everybody has access to his office. When he became chairman of the committee last December, he said that he would have some one at the door to stop people from coming in.

But when he goes about the business of cutting the cord of government, he works without gloves.

"We don't play politics in the appropriations committee," he says. "We are not a partisan outfit. We are all interested in reducing expenses."

On the floor of the house Byrnes is particularly effective. He is one of the few old-time senators left in the house. They don't wait out very often on "Catie Joe" when he's going good.

Not Byrnes seems imperturbed. Twenty-two years on the appropriate-

ment committee—13 of them as his party's ranking member—he has earned him with a pretty thick hair and a ready "No."

Welcome to the Grotto.

Marion's uptown district has donated an array of gale colors this week to provide a suitable setting for the eighth convention of the Ohio State Grotto association.

It is suitable not only as an expression of the spirit in which the city receives the several thousand prophets and members of their families as its guests, but because bright colors are symbolic of the spirit which dominates the organization.

The Grotto, an organization in the sovereign program of the convention reads, is a "playground for the Master Mason." It provides a common meeting place where Masons of all degrees can meet, mingle, fraternize and indulge in pure, clean, wholesome fun and frolic, without trespassing upon or detracting from the solemn dignity of the lodge. It has a smile for all and a frozen for none.

An organization of that sort fills an important role and performs a worthwhile mission, for most assuredly the world can not be provided with too many means and agencies for keeping the people that populate it in good humor. The Grotto enables men to forget the hardships and wearisome phases of life and through the tonic of recreation and laughter to strengthen themselves for better performance of their daily tasks.

Members of such organizations as the Grotto are not the only ones, of course, who benefit by the organization's existence and activities. Its good cheer spreads beyond the confines of the lodge hall to enliven the spirit of outsiders. In this way, Marion will benefit from the presence of the Grotto visitors this week.

The Grotto convention is one of several important state assemblies that have been held here this year, the greatest convention year in the city's history. Citizens hope that the hundreds attending this final gathering of the series will enjoy their visit so thoroughly and will find Marion's hospitality of such quality that they will be glad that this was the choice for their 1932 meeting place.

From the Heart.

Unfortunately for the good of the cause, Alfred E. Smith's renewal of friendship with Governor Roosevelt happened to fall on a day when President Hoover was holding the center of attention. The actual handshake and affectionate expressions were bound to be an anticlimax, even had they been the most important political development of the day. As it is, they are just an additional sign that politics not only makes strange bedfellows but brings them back under the covers when they quarrel.

Mr. Smith's position had been untenable for weeks. As long as he continued to throw his bombs at the Republicans, as long as he continued to remain in the United States through the campaign period, he was bound to cover up his irritation with Mr. Roosevelt's counter of later. By postponing the event, or perhaps by failing to get around to it, he has destroyed most of the good effect that a public reconciliation might have had at an earlier date.

There is not the slightest reason for an Al Smith Democrat or a Roosevelt Democrat to believe that the ruction which marred the Democratic convention has been forgotten, even though it has been shoved aside to preserve the appearance of harmony in the party. Mr. Smith's friends, no more than Mr. Smith, will be able to think of the "deal" by which the humiliating process was shortened, without resentment. If Mr. Roosevelt is elected and if the chicken is hatched by the arrangement at Chicago come home to roost, there will be little inclination in the conservative group of Democrats to sympathize.

But it has been done, and that's the important thing. As he took the platform to nominate Colonel Herman H. Lehman for governor of New York, Mr. Smith grasped Governor Roosevelt's hand and greeted his estranged friend affectionately. The crowd roared. "Al, this is from the heart," said the governor. "Frank, that goes for me too," Mr. Smith replied. And that was that. It was a long time coming.

When acidosis is present there is, as the term indicates, too much acid in the tissues of the body and in the blood. Severe acidosis is extremely serious.

The balanced diet in the blood there is a definite relationship between the normal amounts of acid and alkaline substances. It is true that the diet can influence the degree of acidity in the body, but it does not necessarily alter the reaction of the blood. Contrary to common belief, most acid foods, such as the citrus fruits, actually combat the tendency to acidity. They help to keep the blood alkaline, and prevent the urine from becoming acid.

In the previous article I pointed out that certain foods are known as "base forming" foods. These tend to reduce the amount of acidity in the body. Among them are almonds, apples, avocados, bananas, cabbage, milk, lemons, raisins, radishes, potatoes and turnips. On the contrary, bread, eggs, fish, poultry, meat, chicken, pork, veal, catfish, and many other meats, are "acid forming" foods. They tend to increase the acidity in the body.

Not that the Tennesseean is the type of person you would classify as hardbitten. He is almost the opposite from that. He is humorous and kindly. He keeps a steady brown eyes look through steady brow.

And he admits that he knew all the time to conduct his committee in an informal, "folksy" way.

Everybody has access to his office. When he became chairman of the committee last December, he said that he would have some one at the door to stop people from coming in.

But when he goes about the business of cutting the cord of government, he works without gloves.

"We don't play politics in the appropriations committee," he says. "We are not a partisan outfit. We are all interested in reducing expenses."

On the floor of the house Byrnes is particularly effective. He is one of the few old-time senators left in the house. They don't wait out very often on "Catie Joe" when he's going good.

Not Byrnes seems imperturbed. Twenty-two years on the appropriate-

ment committee—13 of them as his party's ranking member—he has earned him with a pretty thick hair and a ready "No."

An Unspectacular Campaign.

It is sometimes good political strategy to lay the cards on the table, face up. It is a direct approach. Voters know where the politicians stand and in what direction they are most likely to jump.

It is an essential preliminary to an appeal to reason, which is the best maneuver open this year to Republicans advocating support of the national ticket. To Democrats is left the appeal to prejudice; they have been making the most of it.

There has been general agreement on the point that an election held any time from the beginning of the campaign up to the present would have resulted in victory for Franklin D. Roosevelt. The plaudits Republicans have admitted it, honestly. They do not underestimate the power of the "grouch vote" in the coming election.

It would be fatal to the Republicans' ticket today, and probably tomorrow. But between tomorrow and election day there is a period of time which means the difference between certain defeat and possible victory for Herbert Hoover.

Republicans must continue their appeal to reason before election day. They must plead with voters to take a second look before committing themselves to the Democratic candidate. They must work against allowing dissatisfaction and resentment to force them into an action that does not bear the approval of their own judgment. They must ask the electors to weigh the two candidates in an even balance. Then it will be safe to decide whether Franklin Roosevelt, or the White House to which the monetary power of venting a grouch by repudiating the candidacy and record of a man who has exercised the presidential power to the fullest extent in his determination to save his countrymen as much of the shock from economic collapse as possible.

This is not a spectacular way of running a campaign. It does not harvest votes nearly as rapidly as the year's Democratic method of cajoling on discontent with an issue of glittering promises. Compared with Republican campaigns of former years, it is a defeated method, stripped of bombast and as painfully honest and sincere as a pair of faded cotton socks. Small wonder that its effectiveness is held in doubt.

Trying to describe why Mr. Roosevelt is not a worthy opponent to President Hoover quickly turns into a process of outwitting the Democratic candidate's failure to be anything specific. Republicans can not charge that he is a radical simply because he has made overtures to radicals. Obviously, he is after their support, just as he is after the support of conservatives and neutrals.

They can not charge that he is to do in New York what he promises to do in the nation. His entire campaign has consisted of promises, perfectly legitimate as campaign material, but vague and unfulfilling as social and economic facts. They can not condemn him for failing to speak out on the veterans' cash bonus issue, furthermore, because it is clearly evident that he wants the veterans' vote—that with them, as with everyone else, he intends to do all things to all men.

Republicans can ask these questions, however, and let their case with the voters susceptible to reason rest on them: Who knows what Franklin Roosevelt believes? Why should any citizen who believes in the American system throw out a President whose belief in that system is unflinching for a wobbler candidate willing to give lip service to anything for the sake of being elected?

A Hard Employer.

Hopful young pitchers who used to dream about being as good as Walter Johnson are still flung back and dreaming. Johnson's famous fast ball isn't fast any more, but batters who used to swing at it when it was thudding into the catcher's mitt haven't forgotten. Perhaps it has speeded up a little in the telling, but there is a safe margin for exaggeration. Nature doesn't get the right arrangement of factors to make an arm like Johnson's in every generation.

That arm did professional baseball a lot of good while it remained supple. The eyes, the brain and the nervous system that directed it would have been difficult to duplicate. Unfortunately, they had to slow up. At the close of the 1927 season Johnson decided that his big league days were over. It wasn't very long to make the sluggers swing where the ball had been. Time was knocking him out of the box.

It was good news, unexpected good news, when he was recalled from the minor league in 1929 to manage the Washington Senators. Always a popular athlete, he deserved a better break than the odds that drove over worn-out pitchers. But baseball is a hard employer. It demands results, and unless it gets them there is always some one else who might do better.

Walter Johnson is no longer manager of the Senators. He was too easy with the players, it is the reason given. Despite the team's considerably good showing under his management, the owners want results. They want a pennant. So it's farewell to the Big Train, one of baseball's brightest figures. He may find a part of the satisfaction in some other job that he used to give when he was moving them down at the plate with the ball they couldn't see.

Marion's uptown district has donated an array of gale colors this week to provide a suitable setting for the eighth convention of the Ohio State Grotto association.

It is suitable not only as an expression of the spirit in which the city receives the several thousand prophets and members of their families as its guests, but because bright colors are symbolic of the spirit which dominates the organization.

The Grotto, an organization in the sovereign program of the convention reads, is a "playground for the Master Mason." It provides a common meeting place where Masons of all degrees can meet, mingle, fraternize and indulge in pure, clean, wholesome fun and frolic, without trespassing upon or detracting from the solemn dignity of the lodge. It has a smile for all and a frozen for none.

An organization of that sort fills an important role and performs a worthwhile mission, for most assuredly the world can not be provided with too many means and agencies for keeping the people that populate it in good humor. The Grotto enables men to forget the hardships and wearisome phases of life and through the tonic of recreation and laughter to strengthen themselves for better performance of their daily tasks.

Members of such organizations as the Grotto are not the only ones, of course, who benefit by the organization's existence and activities. Its good cheer spreads beyond the confines of the lodge hall to enliven the spirit of outsiders. In this way, Marion will benefit from the presence of the Grotto visitors this week.

The Grotto convention is one of several important state assemblies that have been held here this year, the greatest convention year in the city's history. Citizens hope that the hundreds attending this final gathering of the series will enjoy their visit so thoroughly and will find Marion's hospitality of such quality that they will be glad that this was the choice for their 1932 meeting place.

Unfortunately for the good of the cause, Alfred E. Smith's renewal of friendship with Governor Roosevelt happened to fall on a day when President Hoover was holding the center of attention. The actual handshake and affectionate expressions were bound to be an anticlimax, even had they been the most important political development of the day. As it is, they are just an additional sign that politics not only makes strange bedfellows but brings them back under the covers when they quarrel.

Mr. Smith's position had been untenable for weeks. As long as he continued to throw his bombs at the Republicans, as long as he continued to remain in the United States through the campaign period, he was bound to cover up his irritation with Mr. Roosevelt's counter of later. By postponing the event, or perhaps by failing to get around to it, he has destroyed most of the good effect that a public reconciliation might have had at an earlier date.

North Dakota has voted for the Republican presidential candidate in seven of the last 10 elections. In 1928 it voted for the people's party's candidate and in 1912 and 1916 for Wilson.

The political situation in the state is complicated by division of the Republican party into two factions, the Non-Partisan league and the Independent Voters' association. Republican nomination for state office usually has been equivalent to election.

In the state elections of 1920, George F. Shafer (R.) was elected with 135,264 votes against 41,988 for Pierce Blewett (D.).

The presidential preference primaries of last March found the total of Democratic votes exceeding the Republicans for the first time in the history of the preference primary. In the state primaries of June the larger vote was cast in the Republican balloting. Non-Partisan league candidates

In the current campaign the Republican state central committee, controlled by the Non-Partisan league, has made no expression on presidential candidates.

Child, 3, Well Supplied with Grandparents

To have a birthday and Christmas fall on the same date or even to have 10 grandparents to remember those anniversaries would be something worth while in any little girl's life but to have both would be just all that anyone might ask in the way of good fortune.

This is just what has fallen to the lot of little Marjorie Joan Selzer, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Joseph Selzer of the Marion and Delaware place.

Marjorie will celebrate her third birthday anniversary next Christmas. As the representative of the fifth generation she has always spent her birthday with her great-grandparents. Well supplied as she is with grandparents she has only four aunts and only one uncle by marriage.

Marjorie's great-grand-grandparents are Mr. and Mrs. F. M. Parish of 358 South Main street.

STATE FILES DUBBIN BRIEF

Prosecutor Denies Necessity of Establishing Identity of Principal in Case.

Special to The Star
HOCKEY Oct. 1.—Holding that it is not necessary to establish the identity of the principal in a case of a new trial in the case of the state against W. W. Durbin convicted in August on a charge of circulating unsigned election literature.

The argument is in answer to the brief filed by Attorney Fred Warner and William Medley, defense counsel last week in which the defense argued that the person who caused the literature to be circulated had not been established and therefore their client could not be convicted as an aider or abettor.

Both briefs have been forwarded to Judge David Thomas of Marietta who occupied the bench after the withdrawal of Common Pleas Judge C. U. Hill when the case was heard here.

Complaint literature admittedly was illegally circulated in Crawford county. Durbin knew it was to be circulated and ordered his printing plant to print it. He had a clear cut motive for attacking the candidacy of Charles F. Schaefer and promoting the candidacy of Brooks Fletcher candidate for congress.

Durbin remains under bond on the second charge and attempted blackmail an indictment returned by the same grand jury which brought the charge on which the motion is now pending.

WARNING

And a Protection to You

THE success of the Gillette Blue Blade has been so spectacular that imitations have appeared on the market. This was to be expected. The extraordinary quality of the Gillette Blue Blade won tens of thousands of friends overnight. The Blue Blade swept the country and soared to leadership. Men everywhere demanded this extraordinary blade and identified it by its color.

Today color identification is not enough. The quality and shaving performance of the Gillette Blue Blade cannot be matched but the color is being imitated. For this reason you must be careful. We urge you to insist on the genuine Gillette Blue Blade. Avoid disappointment. Look for the picture of King C. Gillette on the package. It identifies the genuine. If this photograph does not appear on the package, the blades inside are imitations. Once again we warn you—look for King C. Gillette's picture on the package.

WARNING—Color alone is not sufficient identification. Look for the portrait and signature of King C. Gillette on the package.

When you shave with a Gillette Blue Blade you get comfort hard to describe. You scarcely feel the blade as it removes your beard. You buy Gillette Blue Blades on our positive guarantee of complete satisfaction. If you aren't entirely pleased, return the package and the dealer will refund your money.

Don't try to use a "one-shot" flour for all-purpose baking. Flour made from only one type of wheat doesn't always work right for all baked foods. You need this "balanced" flour. It's a mixture of different kinds of the finest wheat, blended to work perfectly for all your baking, all the time.
